| 8. Indonesia
(NIE 65-57) | 30 July |

* The Net Evaluation Subcommittee has an annual requirement for an up-to-date Soviet nuclear capabilities estimate in January. To bring the production of the annual estimate on their subject into phase with this requirement, a Special National Intelligence Estimate will be published in January 1958, which will be essentially an up-dating of NIE 11-2-57 rather than a complete revision of that paper.

Tentative List*

22. Poland

Since, as estimated in NIE 12-57, there are considerable elements of instability in the Polish internal situation and in Polish-Soviet relations, a special estimate may become necessary at some time during the next several months.

23. Major Trends Affecting
US Interests in the Middle East

While a general assessment taking account of probable Soviet moves and other developments may be required during this programming period, it would be more useful to await a decision to revise the Near East policy paper or another specific request before undertaking such an estimate.

24. Ceylon

It is believed that an estimate on Ceylon would be useful. While the base issue with the UK has apparently been settled satisfactorily, the longer-range political and economic outlook for Ceylon gives some cause for concern. In addition, Ceylon's future

* Estimates are listed as tentative when either their timing or their precise subject remains uncertain. We anticipate that several of the items on this list will be placed on the regular production schedule during the course of this quarter.
